When leaving my native launch.
When fading in the distant sky
My native shore recede from view,
And memory turns, with tearful eye,
To sigh to all the loved, adieu;
Then shall a rising thought of thee
Steal gently o'er my frenzied breast,
Kind as the dream of infancy,
When cherub guard its smiling rest.

When, tossed upon the angry waves,
And barque shall seem to cleave the skies,
Or sinking deep to ocean's caves,
While Hope within my bosom dies;
Even in death dark and dreadful hour,
Fancy shall paint the smiling sigh
And pointing to that guardian Power,
That hears and heeds the feeblest cry.

When gliding o'er the [illegible] seas,
Like some lone Spirit of the deep,
And barque shall bound before the breeze,
Cleaving the billows as they sleep;
Perchance some rude, chanted lay,
With wind and waters mingling free,
Shall waft me on its tones away,
To home and happiness and thee.

And should I hail again the land-
The glorious land that gave me birth-
And grasp once more the friendly hand,
Upon that dear and hallowed earth;
Oh, may I hear thy well-known voice
Welcome the wanderer of the sea!
Then while his heart and tongue rejoice,
His prayers shall rise to heaven for thee.

The spot where I was born.

I have wandered on thro many a clime
Where flowers of beauty grow
Where all was blissful to the heart,
And lovely to the view;
I have seen them in their twilight pride,
And in the dress of morn;
But none appeared so sweet to me,
As the spot where I was born.

I have wandered on thro many a clime,
And gazed on Palaced walls;
Yet never wished that step of mine,
Should tread these stately halls;
For midst the pomp that circled me,
Still should be forlorn;
Give me, give me the lowliest cot,
And the spot where I was born.

Lines on parting with a friend.

Accept dear friend, these lines from me,
They show that I remember thee,
And hope and trust you will retain
Of me, till we shall meet again.

But if on earth we meet no more,
I hope to meet on Canaans shore,
Where perfect bliss we shall attain;
There let us strive to meet again.

As dust parts you far from me,
Where each the other cannot see,
And each may heard affliction
Then let us strive to meet over yon.

When I have parted with my breath,
And lay within the arms of death,
May I in your warm heart remain,
Till we shall meet in heaven again.

As life itself is very brief,
Your bloom will wither like the leaf,
But when we sleep beneath the sod
We'll meet around the throne of God.

Yes, dear one, in the envied train,
Of those around, thy homage fain;
But pilot Hand proved kindly deigned
To think of him that's fain away:
Thy fervent, shined eye, shined angle smile,
For many years I may not see;
But pilot Hand not some times the while,
My sister dear, remember me!

But not in fashion's brilliant hall,
Surrounded by the gay and fair,
And Hand the fairest of them all-
I think not, think not of me there.
But when the thoughtless crowd is gone,
And hushed the voice of senseless glee,
And all is silent, still and lone,
And Hand art freely remembered me.

Remember me- but loveliest, nay er,
When in his artic fair and high,
The morning's glowing charioteer,
Rides proudly up the blushing sky;
But when the waning moon-beam sleeps
On moon light and that lonely lea
And nature's frenzied spirits weeps
Oh still her dear remember me.

Remember me, I pray- but not
The "Rose's" gay and blooming head,
When gaily breaks earth loud its note,
And sunshine smiles in every flower;
But when the falling leaf is dear,
And withers sadly from the tree,
Then o'er the mind of the year
Cold Autumn weeps- oh remember me.

Remember me- but choose not, dear,
The hour when, on the gentle lake,
The Shartine wavelets, blue and clear,
Soft rippling, to the margin break;
But when the deafening billows foam
O'er madness o'er the faithless sea,
Then for thy pilgrim fancy roam
Across them, and remember me.

Remember me- but not to join
The hasty tone the thy friends should praise;
Tis sad too dear, that voice of thine
To echo what the Stranger says.
They know us not- but should'st thou meet
Some faithful friends of me and thee
Softly, & sometimes, to him repeat
Thy name, and then remember me.

Remember me- not; I entreat;
Tho seemed of festal week-day joy
For then it were not kind or meet,
The thoughts thy pleasure should allay;
But on the Sacred, Solemn day
Thine, dearest, on thy bended knee,
When thou for those thou lov'st dost pray
Sweet Spirit, then remember me.

Remember me- but not as I,
On thee for ever, ever dwell,
With anxious heart and drooping eye,
And doubts I'm sure grieve thee should I tell;
But in thy calm unclouded heart,
Where dark and gloomy visions flee,
Oh there, my Sister, be my part,
And kindly there remember me.

Oh! ask not a home in the mantions of pride,
Where marble shines out in the pillers and walls;
Though the roof be of gold it is brilliantly cold
And joy may not be found in its torch-lighted halls.
But seek for a bosom all honest and true,
Where love once awakened will never depart;
Turn, turn to that breast like the dove to its nest,
And you'll find there's no home like a home in the heart.

Oh! link but one spirit that's warmly sincere,
That will lighten your creature and solace your care;
Find a Soul you may trust as the kind and the just
And be sure that the world holds no treasure so rare.
Then the frowns of misfortune may shadow and lay
The cheek-bearing tear-drops of Sorrow may Start;
But a Star never dim shades a halo for him
Who can turn for repose to a home in the heart.

The Sheet whale I was born.
I have wandered on thro' many a clime,
Where flowers of beauty grew;
Where all was blissful to the heart;
And lovely to the view;
I have seen them in their twilight pride,
And in the dress of morn;
But none appeared So sweet to me,
As the Sheet whale I was born.

I have wander'd on thro' many a clime,
And gazed on Palace walls;
Yet never wished that Step of mine,
Should tread those stately halls;
For midst the pomp that circled me,
I still, should be forlorn;
Give me, give me the lowliest cot
On the Sheet where I was born.

I ask not for more gay attire-
If such as I have got
Suffice to make me fair to Thee,
For more I murmur not:
But I would ask some share of Love
That you at times bestow-
To knowledge that you prize so much,
May I not sometimes know?

Abstract from meetings among men
Each eve an hour for me-
Make me companion of your Soul,
And I may Surely be!
If you will read, I'll sit and work;
Then think when you're away.
Lest tedious I shall find the time
Dear Colin, of your stay.

John W. Perry

I love my love in the morning
For she like the morn is fair
Her blushing cheeks its crimson streak
Its clouds her golden hair,
Her glances. its beam so soft and kind
Her tears its dewy showers,
And her voice the tender whispering wind,
That stirs the early flowers.

I. love my love in the morning
I. love my love at noon-
For she is bright as the lord of light
And smiled as autumn moon-
Her beauty is my heaven, and,
Her faith my fostering shade.
And I will love my darling end.
Till. heaven and that and shall. fade,

I. love my love in the morning=
I. love my love at evening=
Her smiles soft play is like the ray
That lights the western heavens,
I. loved her when ~~she~~ the sun was high.
I. loved her when she rose
But best of all when evenings sigh
Its murmuring at its close;
